

TRANSPORTATION

How is McCollister's transportation different from standard freight services?

McCollister's specializes in transportation for assets that demand more planning, protection, and accountability than typical freight. Rather than applying a fixed process, we tailor equipment, handling methods, and routing to the specific asset and environment involved.

Do you handle both simple and complex transportation moves?

Yes. McCollister's supports everything from straightforward point-to-point moves to highly complex, time-sensitive, or high-value shipments. Regardless of complexity, every move is managed with the same disciplined approach and attention to detail.

How do you determine the right transportation approach for a move?

Each move is evaluated individually. Our teams consider asset characteristics, access conditions, timing, and risk factors to align the appropriate equipment, handling protocols, and routing—rather than defaulting to a one-size-fits-all solution.

Can transportation plans be customized for different industries or asset types?

Absolutely. Many industries have distinct transportation requirements, and we apply industry-specific knowledge where it matters. At the same time, every transportation plan is customized to the asset itself, ensuring the approach fits both the environment and the expectations involved.

What happens if transportation needs change mid-move?

Transportation scope can evolve. If conditions, timelines, or scope change, McCollister's can adapt while maintaining continuity and accountability. Our teams coordinate adjustments without introducing unnecessary handoffs or disruption.
